

Georgia Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development Annual Conference February 9-10, 2006

"Constructing the Future: Challenging the Past Excellence in Learning, Teaching, and Leadership"
Sea Palms Resort, St. Simons Island

The Georgia Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development invites you to attend our Annual Conference scheduled February 9-10, 2006. We are excited about this year's conference which promises to be engaging, interactive, and content appropriate as we present nationally-known educators,

Donna Davis and Carl Glickman

Donna Anderson-Davis, M. Ed.

Preparing to Implement Standards

Donna M. Anderson-Davis, M. Ed., is Director of Professional Development with the Center for Performance Assessment. With experience as a teacher, principal, and Director of Professional Development, Donna uses the variety of her experience to offer specific strategies and suggestions to her audience. She has worked with classroom teachers, subject-matter coordinators, curriculum specialists, accountability task force groups, standards implementation teams, and administrative leadership teams. She has more than sixteen years of experience as a high school teacher and administrator. In her last position as principal, she was successful in "Making Standards Work" and her school received state recognition for significant improvement. Her areas of expertise include aligning curriculum and instruction to standards, standards implementation in the classroom, data-driven decision-making, and the development of school accountability plans.

Donna has keynoted and presented workshops at regional and national conferences: National School Conference Institute, Wyoming Business Educators Association, Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development, National Staff Development Council, and the Colorado Core Knowledge Conference. Donna has worked with school districts in Kansas, New York, Colorado, Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, North Carolina, Alaska, New Mexico, California, Wyoming, Montana, and Idaho.

Donna also serves as our Director of Professional Development and is responsible for providing leadership in improving and developing all of the professional development offerings at the Center. In addition, she provides support to our trained cadre of consultants to best meet our client demands. Donna also oversees the development and coordination of our certification training program for clients that provides them with on-site expertise in the Center's foundational seminars. Donna is also responsible for archiving client results and best practices to enable us to consistently offer the best service and support to our clients.

Donna currently resides in Denver, Colorado. She holds a Bachelor's degree from Manhattan College, NY, a Master's degree from Regent University, VA, and earned her Principal's license from the University of Phoenix in Denver. She is currently on sabbatical from her doctoral studies in Organizational Leadership at Regent University.

Carl Glickman

“Powerful Schools; Powerful Purpose: Assumptions, Struggles, and Promises to Keep”

Description: Not for the faint hearted; a provocative analysis of the real achievement, economic, and citizenship gap in America and what students, faculty, parents, and community members can do to deliver on the promise of public education. The conventional wisdom about schools, education, curriculum, technology, economic stratification, and student achievement must be replaced with a deeper understanding of the role of education, the capacity of educators, and ways of intellectually challenging all students to connect learning to an ever changing future and a revitalized democratic society for all.

Carl Glickman has just returned to The College of Education at The University of Georgia as “Scholar in Residence” in the new graduate program in Educational Administration in the Department of Lifelong Education, Administration, and Policy. This highly focused PHD and Master's degree program will prepare a new generation of outstanding school leaders, scholars, and policy researchers (<http://www.coe.uga.edu/leap/adminpolicy/about/index.html>).

Glickman will teach, advise, and collaborate with faculty and students on various initiatives related to the public purpose of education. Just prior to his return to UGA, he held the first Endowed Chair in Education at Texas State University -San Marcos.

His career at Georgia began in 1979 and in 1997, he was awarded the University Professorship, the highest faculty career award of the University of Georgia for bringing, "stature and distinction" to the mission of the University. Students also honored him as the faculty member who had "contributed most to their lives, inside and outside the classroom." He was Founder and Chair of the nationally validated University of Georgia League of Professional Schools that partnered with hundreds of schools and districts throughout Georgia for the past fifteen years in providing a democratic education for all future citizens.

He is the author of thirteen books on school leadership, educational renewal, and the moral imperative of education. Leadership for learning was recognized by the National Association of Education Publishers as one of the four outstanding education books of 2002. His 2003 book, Holding sacred ground; Leadership, courage, and endurance in our Schools was acclaimed as one of the most important writings in education today. His edited book, Letters to the next President; what we can do about the real crisis in public education was chosen by Foreword Magazine as one of the two most outstanding books in education for the year 2004. His co-authored textbook on Super-Vision and Instructional Leadership with Steve Gordon and Jovita Ross -Gordon is in its sixth edition and remains a leading text in the field.

Glickman currently is working on a book for parents on how to choose and improve their child's school and is collaborating with University and public school colleagues at local, state, and national levels in how to center educational practices and policies on the public purpose of education. Carl is a founding member of the national policy center entitled The Forum for Education and Democracy (www.forumforeducation.org) and has served on the boards of Kids Voting U.S.A. and the National Commission for Service-Learning.
